JUNIOR

PANTHERS

To be a Junior is more than one may think,
The time you have to apply for college begins to shrink.
The pressure is on, and so is the game,
You're not the same person you were when you first came.
Your future is often on your mind,
To the freshman and sophomores, you're not too kind.
You may be lost on what you want to do; fear may come by,
One may get so stressed and begin to cry.
Majors, minors, jobs, service hours, and credits,
The Juniors can handle it, fear doesn't stay unless you let it.
Some say Senior year can wait,
But the school year's ending is approaching, and so is one's fate.

- Rhiana Parham-Ferrell
